SHERMAN'S SLI[illegible].

A Caustic Summing Up of the Misrepresentations in the General's Memoirs. His Injustice to Fellow Soldiers.

Gen. H. V. Boynton has issued a book, reviewing the recently published memoirs of Gen. W. T. Sherman. The closing chapter is as follows:

In closing this review, based throughout upon facts disclosed by the official files, the case against the author of the memoirs may be summed up as follows: Ten years after the close of the war, when the open and full [illegible] records [illegible] and arranged [illegible] friends were at his service [illegible] has published to the world a story of his campaign crowded with inaccuracies and stained with injustice done his associate commanders and co-operating armies. [illegible] who followed the [illegible] every jealousy [illegible] arose in the field [illegible] memoirs only the central [illegible] fact of common service [illegible] worthy [illegible] to have carried [illegible] neither acted [illegible] [illegible] all [illegible] to follow [illegible] [illegible] his own hand [illegible]

[illegible] to the [illegible] the [illegible] Henry and [illegible] Donald [illegible] to [illegible] Grant [illegible] Sherman [illegible] [illegible] against the [illegible] of [illegible] surprise [illegible] [illegible] that the records set [illegible] that [illegible] credit [illegible] and [illegible] that Grant [illegible] the reports [illegible] found to [illegible] Rosecrans [illegible] brilliant battles. Where he [illegible] visits severe censure in connection with his failure at Chickamauga [illegible] time [illegible] the very [illegible] fighting [illegible] possible [illegible] partial failure of his [illegible] during his own orders [illegible] complete [illegible] and while he [illegible] of going to Mobile, the letters of Gen. Grant who ordered his movements [illegible] Halleck [illegible] his information [illegible] that in certain contingencies Sherman was to push for Mobile. He describes Rosecrans' flank movement to capture Chattanooga as a [illegible] from that city to attack the enemy, and the battle which secured this stronghold as a defeat before it and its occupation after the battle as a retreat into it. He describes the terrible condition of affairs in Chattanooga, following the battle of Chickamauga, and seeks to create the impression that Rosecrans alone was in fault, when the records show that Burnside failed him on the flank, and Sherman on the other—this too, after the pressing necessities of the case had been repeatedly represented to them both, and that finally Burnside never came and Sherman himself was seven weeks behind the time set for his arrival at Chattanooga, exhibiting no special activity in his advance until after Rosecrans was removed, when suddenly, under Grant's request to come, the energy of his movement surpassed praise. While he states that Grant was afraid the Army of the Cumberland could not be drawn out of its trenches to attack Bragg, and wanted Sherman's men to come up and coax them into fighting by the power of their example, the records show that Grant had confidence enough in Thomas' army to order it—before Sherman was within supporting distance even—to do what the latter afterward failed to [illegible] and further that when Gen. Thomas insisted upon giving [illegible] an attack without waiting for Sherman, who was still delayed with the greater part of his troops, Grant assented, and Thomas actually [illegible] that part of the battle assigned for the first day before Sherman arrived, and [illegible] that the Army of the Cumberland [illegible] the [illegible] of Missionary Ridge hours before Sherman [illegible] received the news of the great success. [illegible] controller [illegible] after splendid fighting to carry the point [illegible] to him. While he contends that the failure to [illegible] at Resaca was due to the timidity of General McPherson, the records show that this officer acted exactly in accordance with Sherman's own orders, and while the latter claims that from the outset of the movement it was his intention merely to feign through Buzzard Roost on Dalton and press the bulk of the army through Snake Creek Gap on Johnston's rear, the records show that for three days he assaulted precipices in front of Dalton with Thomas' and Schofield's armies before he allowed McPherson to make more than a diversion on Johnston's rear, so that the latter being warned in time withdrew safely. At Kenesaw he assaulted impregnable works to teach his veterans that flanking was not the only means of attacking an enemy, and failed at a cost of 2,000 men, claiming now that Thomas, McPherson and Schofield agreed with him that the assault was necessary, when the records clearly reveal Thomas' determined [illegible] and a bold extension to [illegible] by Schofield, which plainly indicates that the latter looked for success in the direction from which it finally came, through their old and sure method of flanking.

He describes the battle before Atlanta where McPherson fell in such a manner that no reader would dream of its being a great surprise, and well nigh serious, but the records disclose an army plunged by the flank against an enemy in position behind heavy works on the supposition that Atlanta was evacuated, suddenly and unexpectedly attacked by the enemy upon its left and rear before it had ceased to exult over the announcement from Sherman that the enemy had abandoned Atlanta, and his order for a vigorous pursuit. While he claims that he originated the march to the sea and had it in his "mind's eye" by the 21st of September, the records prove that Grant had planned the campaign through to Mobile in the previous January, notified Halleck of it on the 15th day of that month, Thomas on the 19th and that in February Thomas was arranging the details of the move as far as Atlanta. The records show further that on the 20th of September Grant suggested a move from Atlanta on Augusta or Savannah instead of Mobile, since the control of the latter had passed into the hands of the Union forces.

Concerning Savannah, the records reveal an escape of Hardee with ten thousand, from Sherman's sixty thousand without disclosing even a plausible excuse. Here the memoirs show Sherman looking back to Nashville, from whence alone, through defeat of Hood, could come a success that should vindicate his march to the sea, and finding fault with Thomas, who, though crippled in all ways by Sherman, was, through superhuman efforts there, saving him from the jeers of the nation.

In treating of Savannah he also attacks Mr. Stanton for carelessness in connection with the captured cotton, and transactions relating thereto, while the records show, not only that he had absolutely no foundation for his charges, but that in most respects the exact opposite of what he wrote was true. After a magnificent and really wonderful march through the Carolinas, with every warning as the memoirs relate, that the enemy was rapidly concentrating in his front, the records show that he neglected all precautions, and marched the two wings of his army, neither moving in close order, so far apart that when the head of the left wing was attacked at 10 o'clock one forenoon, by the whole Rebel Army, estimated by himself to have been from thirty-seven to forty thousand, the advance of his right wing, marching to the sound of battle to support the left, did not arrive till the next morning, while the bulk of this wing did not reach the field till the following afternoon, and then when his whole force was in front of and on the flank of the enemy, the latter escaped. Such is the record history of Bentonville, the last battle of his army.

What shall be said of the political negotiations which followed? What need be said further than the records show that, beginning with a proposition to receive the surrender of Johnston's forces upon the same terms Grant had extended to Lee, he ended by surrendering to Johnston upon terms drawn up by a member of the Rebel Cabinet.

The Manager of the TRIBUNE being desirous of making improvements in, and adding to, the business of the paper, offers for sale stock of the Company to the amount of one-quarter, one third, or one-half of the entire business.

Further particulars will be given upon application to the Manager, B. A. Dewes, at this office

An interesting communication from a TRIBUNE correspondent who is traveling through Santa Clara county will be found on the local page. A second letter, somewhat descriptive of San Jose, will appear to-morrow.

THE Council did a very wise thing last evening in passing an ordinance to prohibit the carrying of concealed weapons. Two-thirds of the shooting scrapes result from the pernicious practice of packing about firearms, which is indulged in promiscuously by men and boys in this. If the ordinance be rigidly enforced, the effect will be beneficial.

THE News had shame enough to suppress that portion of the Council proceedings which referred to Manager Sullivan's attempt to swindle the City. Not a word of the affair appears in the report this morning. Without choosing to appear officious, we would suggest to Rev. Mr. Hamilton the propriety of delivering a sermon from the text "Thou shalt not steal," and have it published in his organ for the manager's and the City's benefit.

GEN. SHERMAN'S Memoirs are criticised in a very caustic manner by Gen. Boynton, in a book just issued, the closing chapter of which will be found on the first page of this paper. Sherman is made to face the records in a very unpleasant manner, and even his own orders are brought up in judgment against some of the erratic assertions of his "Memoirs." If the preceding chapters of Boynton's book read as well as the last, it will prove an exceedingly interesting sequel to Sherman's story.

LAST evening the startling intelligence of the loss of the steamer Pacific was received in this city. It was only a vague, uncertain rumor, but a thrill of horror followed in its wake as it swiftly sped through the city. The dispatches this morning seem to verify the worst phase of last evening's rumor. The statement of the only known survivor appears in another column. It is possible that more of the passengers or crew were saved, but the foundation upon which the hope is based is very slight. The San Francisco papers claim that the Pacific was a staunch, seaworthy vessel.

THE San Francisco Ledger terminated its brief career last night at the witching hour of twelve, when journalistic graveyards yawn and the ghost of defunct newspapers walk the murky streets of 'Frisco. The Ledger has been for some days seriously affected with Navy on the stomach, which kept it in a constant state of nausea; but the suckling appeared strong as long as its nurse, Mark L. McDonald, furnished it sustenance. The infant became an abomination in the eyes of that kind hearted individual, however, and he withdrew the life giving pap—and the child died. Harry George might have been a success before the mast—he would make a passable poop-deck hand—but he is not constituted to command an entire fleet. Flags are at half-mast on all the government buildings out of respect to the mourners. Coroners Fitch and Pickering will hold an inquest this evening.

THE predictions of the TRIBUNE in regard to the intended course of the News, in the matter of the city printing, have been completely verified. By reference to the proceedings of the Council, it will be seen that the swindling concern has attempted to defraud the city by charging four times the contract price for advertising. This is just what we said Manager Sullivan would do. Fortunately, the City Marshal had been warned by the TRIBUNE, and he blocked the tricky "manager's" confidence game. The swindle was so perfectly bald-faced that the City Attorney went back upon his friends, and denounced the thing as a fraud. It will only require a few months' time to convince the public of the real character of the "manager" who was put in position "for a purpose." It is not necessary to expose what is already known—we prefer to give him rope and let him hang himself before the whole community.

THE vindicative tenacity with which some of the brethern of the Presbyterian Church hound ex-Rev. T. M. Dawson is not calculated to inspire "sinners" with confidence in the sincerity of those who continually preach about the beauties of Christianity. Mr. Dawson has been trying, apparently, to keep quiet and bemean himself as every respectable citizen should, but Dominy Poor who is Dawson's chief persecutor, insists upon grilling his foe over an everlasting ecclesiastical bed of hot coal. Mr. Dawson resigned from the ministry, and his resignation was accepted. But he was not allowed to depart in peace. His enemies cited him to appear before the Presbytery, and undergo a trial. The object was not so much to punish Dawson as to ventilate a lot of scandal. Mr. D., finding that there was neither mercy or charity in the hearts of his persecutors, has appealed to the Courts, and yesterday the members of the Presbytery were served with a judicial injunction to let Mr. Dawson's character alone, temporarily, and to appear in Judge Wheeler's court on the 19th instant, and show cause why the injunction should not be made perpetual. This unheard of proceeding took the Presbytery by surprise, and after appointing a committee to employ council, the good men adjourned to appear before the court. It is about time Poor and his crowd "let up" on Dawson, if they have any regard for their reputations as Christian gentlemen.

FRELINGHUYSEN FOR PRESIDENT.

The business of President-making has commenced on this Western shore—that is to say, the Federal officials have put forth their candidate. It is essentially necessary that the successor of General Grant should be under the influence of the two Republican Dromios, Sargent and Gorham. Otherwise there is likely to be a complete reorganization of the "bread and butter brigade." Gorham's candidate is Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey. The custom house officials and other Federal office-holders have received their instructions from headquarters, and from this time forth we shall hear a great deal about the virtues of Mr. Frelinghuysen and his peculiar qualifications for the Presidency. Upon our neighbor, the Transcript, has devolved the pleasing task of introducing the gentleman from New Jersey to the people of California as a Presidential candidate, and as usual it performed the task cheerfully and gracefully. One by one, the faithful throng who look up to Sargent, and meekly say, "Father' master' thy will, not ours, be done'" will echo the glad refrain, and the name of Frelinghuysen will stretch from Humboldt to San Diego. Gorham's programme has been entered upon—the Transcript's article was the introductory overture. The chorus by the followers will next be heard, and during the course of the ensuing session of Congress the candidate himself is to be brought upon the stand to exhibit his qualities in a carefully prepared speech. This will be generally circulated throughout the country, for the purpose of creating public sentiment in favor of Mr. Gorham's candidate. Let Republicans pay heed and see if this order of business is not carried out to the letter. If it be, then the next step will be the securing of the convention to elect delegates to the National Convention. This will be a comparatively easy matter—the Federal officials—Democrats and Republicans—will attend to that matter.

THAT venerable individual the "oldest inhabitant" has been prophesying a severe winter and the indications are that the predictions will be verified. Among other "sure" sayings is the following which has been observed by one of our corps:

When mosquitoes do not sing
For their meat the grateful hymn,
But like the chickens silent raise
Their little beaks in mutest praise,
Or like the heathen go for food
Without a knowledgment of God,
Be sure the winter's very near—
One remarkably severe.

The Praying Band.

Every Sabbath a little band of Good Samaritans visit the City Prison and pray and talk to the prisoners. Last Sunday the cell-confined sinners were playing an interesting hand of poker when the praying people came along. Quickly the greasy cards were out of sight, but no sooner had the soul-savers departed than another game of seven-up and one of old sledge were going on as lively as before the good people put in an appearance.

The old Methodist Church edifice that for many years stood at the corner of Washington and Ninth Streets has gotten out as far as San Pablo Avenue, just beyond Fourteenth Street. It has been more than a fortnight on its journey. The contractor bargained to move the structure for $550, while the edifice was disposed of for $500. The lot upon which the German congregation is going to erect it, cost its members $3,500. By the time the church is fully reconstructed, it will stand the society about $5,000.

Pleasing Entertainment.

On Friday evening next, the members of Mr. Hamilton's Church, will give a literary and musical entertainment for the benefit of the Church. The cast includes a number of ladies and gentlemen well known in social circles, and great curiosity is expressed to see them. The play chosen is "The Loan of a Lover," and the characters are said to be taken with great life and spirit, and in a manner that will reflect credit on all participating.

The Marshal desired to be instructed upon that point as to the construction of the contract. The City Attorney stated that under the contract, the bills should be 40 cents per 1,000 ems for each notice, whether one time or ten times. A WAR OF RACES.

An Asiatic and Ethiopan Misunderstanding Calling for American Interference.

The culinary department of the Central Pacific Hotel on Webster Street was the scene of an almost terrible tragedy late yesterday afternoon. Jim Wright, a strapping big darkey, was the fellow who received the heavy punishment and is doing the suffering, and Ah Lem, a Christianized heathen Chinese, wielded the butcher-knife with which he did his cutting. Ah Lem is reported to be a good and regular Sunday-school scholar, and has also been for some time the boss cook and dispenser of intricate hash at the Central Pacific Hotel. He has been filling the latter occupation as successor to Jim Wright, the colored man, and as the story goes, Jim visited Ah Lem and presumed to dictate as to how certain dishes should be prepared, which resulted in a disagreement, and anything but an affectionate embrace. In being disentangled, Ah Lem was tossed on the range; but he didn't remain there long, for it was warmer than China ever was or ever will be until the earth shall be destroyed as promised in the good book of Revelations, which so few people now-a-days read. Just at this state of the interesting affair, Ah Jim, a subcook of Ah Lem's, appeared upon the scene with two large butcher knives, one of which he gave to his boss. This pair of armed Mongolians were too much for the defenceless Ethiopian, and they soon had him corralled between the range and the wall where they continued, with barbaric fury, to hack him on the hands, arms and face, until his piteous yells aroused the inmates of the hotel, who rushed into the kitchen and dragged off his infuriated assailants. Jim has numerous big and little cuts; and one, near the jugular vein, the attending physician says, was within half an inch of sending him beyond this "vale of tears." All were arrested last evening and placed in the City Jail. To-morrow Judge Jayne will readjust his judicial spectacles, and if everything else goes right, will cypher down to a dot how much the fun was worth in California coin.

A Brute's Designs Frustrated.

A man about fifty years old yesterday encountered a little girl eleven years of age, who was on her way to school, at the corner of Clay and Montgomery streets, San Francisco, and by offers of money beguiled her to an old rookery near the city front and Clay street, into which he attempted to drag her by force. At this point W. R. Clark of Berkeley, who had been watching him, interfered. He saved the child, but the lecherous villain escaped.

OAKLAND TO SAN JOSE.

Notes of a "Tribune" Correspondent—Alameda Roads—What the Country People Think of Newark—Improvements Through the Valley—The Railroad and the Boatmen—The Narrow Gauge Railroad.

SAN JOSE, Nov. 6th.

When I crossed the Contra Costa range by stage, last Spring, from Oakland to Pacheco, it occurred to me to write a sort of "Sentimental Journey," in imitation of Sterne: but I did not do so, although I might have done so with some propriety. I found no dead donkey on the way to weep over; but what was worse, I found a dead horse on the roadside, brutally shot down the day before, by his owner in a fit of rage, because the poor animal would not draw up hill a heavier load of lumber than his strength would enable him to do. Since then, I have been impressed with the necessity of building not only a better wagon-road, but also a railroad, from Oakland to Walnut Creek—enterprises that ought to be readily undertaken—the wagon road and tunnel by the two counties of Alameda and Contra Costa: and the railroad, by the the enterprise of our local capitalists.

ALAMEDA ROADS.

It was my good fortune to meet on the San Jose train some of our prominent Alameda county men. One of them is a Colonel Sellars, in his way, a gentleman who sees "millions" in everything, but who does not, however, diet on raw turnips. He thought Alameda county ought to spend a million of dollars in the making of new roads and improving the old ones. This would necessitate the issue of bonds, and the Transcript, you know, is opposed to bonds. We have not very good roads to be sure, but I think a million is too much for the present, especially as I am not prepared now to take a contract.

THE NEWARK FRAUD.

Another gentleman, whose destination was Centerville, was strongly of the opinion it was wrong for the papers not to oppose that Newark land fraud. I told him that there was one paper at any rate that was doing its duty in that respect, and that was the TRIBUNE. He told me some amusing stories about the way in which Charley Peters used to fool the strangers he brought down there to look at his worthless lots. Now the "Immigrant Union" is manipulating the matter; but this only means that a certain Mr. Martin has become Mr. Peters' successor, for the "Union" is a myth and Mr. Martin is simply a trader upon its name.

NARROW-GAUGE RAILROAD.

A gentleman present was in favor of continuing the Santa Clara Valley narrow-gauge railroad from Dumbarton Point, along the border of the bay to Alameda and Oakland, arguing that it would assist in developing the vegetable lands along the way. The President of this road I find to be a Mr. Bartling, brother of our Oakland fellow-citizen of that name. He is pushing this railroad enterprise with a good deal of energy, and I have no doubt will make a success of it. It is intended to continue it west from San Jose to Santa Cruz, across the mountains.

A TEDIOUS TRIP.

It takes just two hours and a half to make the trip from San Francisco to San Jose by rail, a distance of forty-eight miles. This road must now pay well as the cars are always full. Many of the passengers are commuters, and some of them live as far away from the city of San Francisco as Washington Corners. Among them I noticed Judge Crane, who resides in the latter place, and E. L. Beard of Mission San Jose.

OLD TIMES BOX.

Among my companions was Joe Mason, our late esteemed city Councilman. He showed me the ground that he farmed near Niles in 1854, when farming was in its infancy in this county. Richard Threlfall, of Centerville, the first man that tried the experiment of growing wheat in the Livermore valley and succeeded, enlightened me on some local points. He has lately planted out a forest of green trees on his farm in Washington township, believing it to be a good investment. I noticed at

DAKOTA STATION,

Where an attempt to start a town was made five years ago, that no success has been achieved, and it is a far better locality for such a purpose than Newark. The trees planted out there in large numbers have not thriven for want of proper attention, and those that survive are slight and unshapely.

THE CARRYING TRADE.

A feature I noticed as new along the route was the erection of grain warehouses at all the stations. The railroad has entered into competition with the bay craft for the carrying trade, but although the former will carry grain for $1 per ton to San Francisco or Oakland, the large farmers prefer to ship to the various landings, because as they know well, if the railroad company succeeded in breaking down the opposition by water, instead of paying $1 per ton for grain they would have to pay $2. I understand that the farmers in the interior valleys, such as Livermore, have to pay $2.50 per ton. A narrow gauge railroad running up the valley from Livermore to Walnut Creek and thence to Oakland, could no doubt, afford to carry such freight for $1 per ton. The latter valley alone, has usually 20,000 tons of grain to send to market every year.

SAILING ON DRY LAND.

Near Warm Springs landing I noticed a small schooner beating her way inward through the channel in the slough, and she looked in the distance as if she were actually voyaging on dry land. Navigation along the sloughs must be very difficult, and I am informed that where two miles would bring them to the landings from the bay in a direct line, they have to pursue such tortuous courses that the distance is stretched out to eight or ten miles.

THE BOTTOM LANDS

Along the valley are gradually falling into the hands of the Portugese farmers, who cultivate them in small patches of five and ten acres, producing profitable crops of vegetables therefrom, and it is evident that ere long the very best lands in the county will be in their possession. They are a very thrifty and inoffensive people, and economical to penury, and a good deal of feeling prevails against them in the minds of some because they are so saving. It is not uncommon to hear it said that they are worse than the Chinese. I would be sorry to find fault with them for their habits of thrift and economy, because I believe those are some of the elements that are badly wanting among us. After a while, when they have made a little money and obtain extravagant notions, they too will be as bad as the rest of us. W. H.

Along the Wharves.

There have arrived at the City Wharf the schooner Harvest Queen, from California City, with brick to Remillard Brothers; also, schooner John Frederick, from San Francisco, with coals to Chappellet & Miner; also, sloop Sarah Ann, from San Francisco, with shingles to Walter Laidlaw; also, schooner Mary Gratwick, from San Francisco, with coals to Thomas & Anderson; also, schooner Industry, from San Francisco, with coals to Geo. H. Naegle; also, schooner Alexina, from Bolinas, with cord wood to Duffy & O'Neil; also barge Renton, from San Francisco, with coals to Renton Coal Company; also, schooner Witch of the Bay, from San Francisco, with coals to Chappellet & Miner. The British iron ship Isle of Bute has been towed over to Long Wharf. She is of 893 tons register, and came last from Glasgow, with a miscellaneous cargo of merchandise. She is loading for Liverpool, and will carry hence about fifteen hundred tons of wheat. Holcomb & Co. are loading her. The iron ship Gilroy is also lying at the same wharf, loading with grain for the Liverpool market. Three schooners are discharging lumber at the wharf, and a coal ship in the storehouse slip.

HORRIBLE.

The Steamship "Pacific" Founders, and More Than One Hundred and Fifty Lives are Lost.

Late yesterday afternoon, the telegraph wires brought the sad and startling intelligence that the steamer Pacific had foundered off Cape Flattery, and that out of 167 passengers, but one life had been saved. The dispatches are ample, but thus far the story they tell emanates from one man. He holds out a gleam of hope that others may be rescued, but it is unquestionable that the greater number of both passengers and crew sleep their last sleep beneath the waves of the Pacific. The steamer, it appears, was well equipped and in good condition, though old. She sailed from Victoria on the 4th, and at 10 P. M. of the same date, sank—one hour and a half after the occurance had taken place which caused her to sink. What this occurrence was, is involved in uncertainty. A southeaster was blowing, but not with such strength as to make it a gale, nevertheless raising a sea which necessitated some precautions to steady the vessel. A crash was heard, and lights were seen, and the more likely conclusion is, that a collision with a passing vessel was the cause. Should this prove the case, there must have been carelessness, as the night was clear, and all collisions under such circumstances are preventable. What measure of negligence, of precaution, of bravery, of self-sacrifice, of good judgment there was afterward, additional information is required before an opinion can be formed, but the steamer had good boats and plenty of them, also life preservers and life rafts, and there was an hour and a half of grace to save life.

HISTORY OF THE VESSEL.

The Pacific was an old vessel, but considered staunch. She was built at New York in 1851, by W. H. Brown, for service on this coast, and until a year ago was owned by the Pacific Mail Company. Along with the Orizaba, the Mohongo, the Ancon and the Senator she was transferred to Goodall, Nelson & Perkins, upon the abandonment by the Pacific Mail Company of its California coasting trade, and since then has been employed in the passenger north, and also down the coast. Her engines in the American Lloyd's for 1875, are described as vertical cylinder, 54 inches. She was 876 tons register, and her dimensions were: Length, 223 feet; beam 34 feet, and depth seventeen feet. Two years ago the Pacific Mail Company had her thoroughly overhauled and repaired, at great expense, under the inspection of Captain R. Waterman. Just before she sailed on her last voyage from San Francisco, Goodall, Nelson & Perkins put her on the dry dock at Hunter's Point and had the bottom cleaned, and also had her re-inspected and re-classified. The surveyors were Messrs. Willis, Wells, Noyes and Trask, and after, as they report, making an inspection which completely satisfied them of the steamer's condition, granted a certificate class-ing her 1½. Goodall, Nelson & Perkins, it may be added, expended $40,000 in refitting her, and they considered her worth $100,000.

PASSENGER LIST.

The following is a list of the cabin passengers on the lost steamer:

From Puget Sound—J. Hellmute and wife, H. C. Victor, Mrs. Mahon and child, Fred D. Hard, J. T. Vining.

Gribell, John McCormick, Isaac Webbs, Col. Mandeville, wife and child, and the Hurlbart and Rockwell Troupe.

In the steerage there were forty passengers, whose names we have not as yet been able to obtain.

THE COMMANDER.

Captain Jeff. Howell, her commander, has been eight or nine years on this Coast, first as Third Officer in the Pacific Mail Company: then in Holladay & Brenham's employ, making several trips to Honolulu, and then for a time in the Pelican, running to Eureka. He made a trip or so on the Southern route, and was appointed a few months since to the command of the Pacific. He was a popular commander, an experienced seaman, and one fully capable for his position. He was thirty-five years of age, a gradute of the Naval Academy of Annapolis, and a nephew of Jeff. Davis, of the Southern Confederacy.

CARGO, TREASURE AND INSURANCE.

A complete manifest of the cargo has not yet been received. She is known to have had on board hops, oats, hides, bolt-staves, and other merchandise. As she was the regular steamer on which shippers from Victoria sent large amounts of treasure, it is supposed she had on board upward of $60,000 in treasure consigned to the Bank of British Columbia and Wells, Fargo & Co.

The vessel was valued at upward of $100,000, but was only insured for $47,000, in the following Companies: Fireman's Fund, $10,000; Union, $10,000; State Investment, $5,000; Commercial, $5,000; Swiss Lloyd Marine, $10,000; New Orleans Mutual, $7,500.

THE SURVIVORS STATEMENT.

Henry F. Jelley, supposed to be the only survivor of the ill-fated vessel was picked up on Saturday by the ship Messenger and taken to Port Townsend. The following is his statement:

My name is Henry Frederick Jelley. I am a native of Ireland, but have lived for the last nine years in the Dominion of Canada, and am of the age of twenty-two years. I took cabin passage on board the steamer Pacific, of which J. D. Howell was master, on the morning of Thursday, the 4th inst., for a voyage to San Francisco, California, and the same morning, at about 9:15, the steamer left the harbor of Victoria, B. C. There were about two hundred people on board, more or less, and we steamed all that day against a head wind blowing from the southeast fresh. During the day the crew were constantly pumping water into the boats, to keep the steamship on an even keel, first on one side and then on the other, and she would list to either side alternately. As I noticed, the boats abaft the paddle-boxes had no oars in them on either side, but the forward boats had oars in them. Between eight and nine o'clock that evening, and while I was in the cabin in bed, I heard a crash, and felt a shock as if we had struck a rock or something of the kind, and heard something fall as if a lot of rocks had broken into us and had fallen in by her starboard bow, and immediately I heard the bell strike to stop her and then to back her and then strike to go ahead.

WHAT WAS HEARD.

I went on deck, and there I heard voices say, "It is all right: we have only struck a vessel," and looking around I saw several lights some distance off on our starboard beam. I think there were three lights. I do not think they were colored lights, but did not pay much attention to them. I went back into the cabin, and was about to turn in, when I noticed her taking a heavy list to port, and then thought she was going down and went on deck. I heard some one say, "She is making water very fast forward!" Went forward to the pilot house, and there heard the purser ask the captain what boat he would take charge of. Did not hear the answer. I asked the captain if there were no blue lights or a gun. He told me I would find blue lights in the pilot house. The captain was at that time coming out of his own room, and I did not see him after that. I then, with another man, whom I did not know, went into the pilot house, found six blue lights, and set five of them off and lost the other one. I then noticed that the engines were still working, but no one was at the wheel. I then went on deck to the starboard side, forward of the paddle box, where a number of the men were trying to get the long boat out, but they could not do it. I then went to see about the port boat forward, and helped five or six ladies into it and tried to get the boat off, but we could not budge the boat. There were about twenty ladies in the boat. I then heard it said that the two boats abaft the wheels had gotten off, but did not see them. The boat I was near was partly full of water and we could not get her off at all. I think it was about an hour from the time the steamer struck up to the time when she listed to port so much that the port boat was let into the water and cut loose from the davits. I was in this boat which, when it touched the water, began to fill and turned over. I crawled upon the bottom of the boat and helped several others up with me.

THE STEAMER BREAKS IN TWO.

Immediately after the steamer seemed to break in two fore and aft, and one-half of the smoke-stack fell to port and the stack struck our boat and pushed it away, and the steamship Pacific sank. I think about all the ladies were in our boat, and when she upset they all fell into the water, and I fear they were drowned. This was about 10 o'clock in the evening. The night was not dark, nor was the sea very rough, but there was a fresh breeze. I afterwards left the bottom of our boat and, with another man, climbed on the top of the pilot-house, which was floating near, and we held on to the upper wire that came out of the top. Next morning I got some life preservers floating near the house and with their ropes lashed myself and my companions to the house. I saw three rafts. The first had one man on, the next had three men and a woman, and the other I could not make out owing to the distance, except that there were human beings on it. I think we were thirty or forty miles south of the cape when the vessel sank. We passed the light on Tattoosh Island between four and five o'clock on the evening of the 4th. I and my comrade were on the top of the pilot-house all of the 5th until about four P. M., when he died. I then cut him loose. The sea was running very high all day, and I think my comrade was drowned by the waves washing over him, he not being strong enough to hold his head up, and the waves constantly washing over us. Soon after he died, I sighted a vessel, and called, and also heard the people on the other rafts calling. I did not see the other rafts after that, and that vessel did not come near me. I spent Friday night on my raft. There was little wind until morning, when it came on to blow again, and the sea became very rough. I was then within a mile from the Vancouver shore. I sighted two vessels on the Washington shore, that passed on, and about ten o'clock A. M. on the sixth (Saturday), I saw a vessel bearing down on me. I was very weak by that time, but waved my hat, and the vessel sent a boat and took me up. The vessel's name, I learn, is the Messenger, and the captain, whose name is J. F. Gilkey, gave me every attention and kindness possible, and did everything in his power to relieve my wants. (Signed.) HENRY F. JELLEY.

HOPEFUL CONCLUSIONS.

Notwithstanding the statement of Mr. Jelley, the rescued passenger, we cannot but hope that many of the passengers will be found to have been saved. If, as he says, there was not a high wind, certainly some of the boats ought to have safely carried their precious freight. Besides, it would seem hard to believe that the colliding vessel would abandon the steamer to its fate, and run by the boats, which were immediately put out. Mr. Perkins says, that each boat had one ten-gallon keg of water and bread enough to support a boat's crew for twenty days. If the steamer really was struck by another vessel, it must be that many of her passengers have been rescued by that vessel. If she struck a sunken rock, there is room for hope that some of her boats will be heard from, and a number of her passengers saved. We think that a more favorable showing will be made when further particulars are received.

The Friend of Webster

A Western paper says He wasn't such an old man but his face was very sad his hair was long and he was bent over. He entered a store on Jefferson avenue, Saturday, and after warming his hands at the stove he inquired of the proprietor:

"Will you give me a little advice?"

"I guess so, what is it?" was the cheerful reply.

The stranger backed up to the stove, wiped his nose on his hand and, after a moment, continued:

"If you wanted to die would you jump into the river or take poison?"

"Well, I don't know about that. I guess I'd rather live on than do either one. Why, do you feel like dying?"

"I do, mister," said the man in a deep-toned voice. "Yes, I've stayed around long enough."

"What's the matter, why do you want to [illegible]?"

"What's there to live for?" demanded the [illegible]. "There [illegible] no such times as there used to [illegible] no such men as there [illegible]."

PATENT ROOF PAINT!

Patented June 21, July 19, Nov. 29, 1870.

Having the exclusive Agency for the Pacific Coast, and having a depot for the manufacture of said paint, we are now prepared to furnish it in any quantity, by the CAN or BARREL, or to

COVER SHINGLE, TIN OR IRON ROOFS

ON VERY REASONABLE TERMS,

By Contract or per Square Foot

The color is ornamental for roofs, resembling a highly polished slate. It can be placed on either tin or shingles already painted, and which are old, saving both the roof and rendering the same impervious to fire and water. In offering this PAINT to the public, we supply a need which has long been felt. Almost without exception shingled roofs have been left without any protection to the scorching sun and the soaking storms, shrinking and swelling and speedily going to ruin and decay, causing leaky roofs and expensive repairs. A preparation that could easily be obtained and applied to any one, and would give ample protection and not be affected by heat or cold, sunshine or storm, and be

AND AT THE SAME TIME

Durable and Extremely Cheap,

Has been long and universally needed, and it is now for the first time fully supplied

BY OUR PAINT.

FOR TIN ROOFS IT IS UNEQUALED!

Being always flexible, it cannot crack and neither heat or cold affect it.

All orders left at our office,
